A SUGAR-AND-WATER

Poor Performance of the Opera

Mr. Conried's presentation of "Faust" the Metropolitan Opera House last

Fed upon the strong meats of Wagmer's music-dramas, the younger generation of opera-goers have come to regard Gounod's work as nothing nore than a dessert; and when the sweet is served they, as well their elders who were brought up on a different musical diet, expect it to be delectable and of some consistency.
What they got was an innocuous mixture of sugar and water-mostly water. There was no life in the per formance. It was distinctly amateurish and devoid of magnetism.

Mms. Aine Ackte, the French primadonna, who was to have made her first American appearance as Marguerite, was indisposed, and in her place was substituted Mme. Camille Sey-was substituted Mme. Camille Seygard, who is not of the artistic stature to which New Yorkers are accustomed.

Then the Faust was Fran Naval, another French singer, who was heard for a first time here on Saturday. He is a nice-looking young man, with a cute mustache and manners that will endear him to the matinee girl. But his acting was weak and his voice was colorless.

Miss Edyth Walker minced and tripped through the part of Siebel in the "girliest" of ways, and Miss Bauerneister, with less voice and more pantomime than usual, was Martha.

Two notable exceptions to the commonplace of the cast were Plancon as Mephistopheles and Scotti as Valentine, both interpretations familiar, satisfying and appreciated. They were as men among mannikins.

In the garden scene Plancon knocked down the spinning wheel and sent a titter through the audience by his successful efforts to kick it out of the way. Gustav Hinrichs conducted.

The house, considering the popularity of "Faust" and that Monday is the heaviest subscription night, was not large and enthusiasm was lacking.

CALVE WORRIED BY THAT MAN CONRIED

He Actually Offers to Cut $14, 000. from the Income of the Great Singer for This Season Alone.

Ah, it is a sad blow to the dear art! Fourteen thousand dollars cut from the season's income of an artiste in one noment-and that artiste the divine the superb, the effervescent Calve. Mon Dieu! A bas le American manager!

Mme. Calve, with the soul of the artiste magnifique, she say to that manager. M. Conried, her voice-organ beatifique-it has grown so full that the sustained high notes of the role, the Countess in "Le Nozze di Figaro," it will be difficult. Her physician advises will be difficult. Her physician advises her not to sing.

M. Couried, ie manager de la opera, he smile. He say, "Out, m'dame," He tell her he cannot think of asking her to sing a role to which she, with the soul of the artiste divine, think she cannot the distribution.

soul of the artiste divine, think she cannot do justice.

M'dame, she smile, M. Conried he is kind. He is considerate.

Then M. Conried, "Non, non, m'dame. I would not ask you to sing. I will cut the seven performances out of your contract. That will reduce your income for the season $11,006."

M'dame she receive for each performance ten thousand francs. Pouf: Seventy thousand francs sweep away in one sweep! Mais foi! Also Parbleu!

Mon Dieu! Similarly, name of a thousand pigs! A fortune gone in one breath.

That M. Conried is so careless in it, the way he speaks of the money. Sacrel: Yes, so very careless.

Aldame she differ to sing other roles. Non, non. M. Conried he could not think of it. M dame Calve should have known whether or not she could sing the roles called for in her contract when she signed it.

As if the artiste divine, the artiste magnifique, could tell so far in the advance.

magnifique, could tell so far in the advance.

She offer to sing Marguerite by messenger. No reply to her note comes. Mme. Ackte is ill. She cannot sing, it is said: M'dame Calve will to the rescue of that manager. M. Conried. Au secours! The artiste generous. No reply is to fier note of kind offer sent.

Is it wonder the soul of that divine Calve is blue? Non, she will not break her contract. She will remain, here, in this, your grand city, where the people love her. She will remain, to the bitter end.

though it sear and scorch the soul o the artiste.

Seven performances—$14,000! Seventy thousand francs cut! Ah, messieurs et mesdames, it is that I weep.

IN THE SHOPS.

A woman who has just reached this country from abroad says she has seen nothing on the other side to compare with the Oriental waists in an original lot made in individual styles and materials here in New York. They are not in Oriental styles, but delightfully smart and up to date, though the East has been spoiled for the material used in many of them. No spoilation was necessary, however, for the automobile waists, which are among the most chic of the lot, the simplest and least expensive. These are of linen in dark blues and greens, made each with an entire front like a military coat, of embroidery in colors upon white, striking in figures and designs, set into the linen on either side with a plait. These are unique in effect and cost only 38.

Another linen blouse, also em-

Spring Suits. -24 FL

Women's Spring Suits-many of the long-guarded style-secrets are out. You may see the new Fashion quirks and learn the latest tricks of adaptation, modification and variation by coming to Macy's. Many of the dressy Spring Costumes are based on the general plan of the full, ruffly effects that prevailed in 1830. And the strictly Tailored suits are not strictly tailored at all. Most of them have lost their severity. A touch of lightness and daintiness here and there has mellowed the old-time rigidity into softer and more feminine lines. But come and
